In connection with the cholers epidemic

In connection with the ctolera epidemic in France and the puesh at me to this day. No, and they laugh at me to this day. No, entleasen, I k-k-can't go to the camp ing on American shores the following augmentings from Florence Nightengale, the celebrated European bospital nurse, will be of special interest. Her practical advice the pond, while the traveling men went to the camp meeting. in view of the rapid spread of cholera is:

She very pertinently insists on vigor

"dcavenge, scavenge, scavenge; warh, c'eanse and limewash; remove all putrid hu nan refuse from privice and cesspite, and cerspools and dustbins; look to stables and cowsheds and pigsticz; look to commor lodging houses and crowded places, dirty houses and yards. 'Set your house in order" in all ways sanitary and hygienic, ac cording to the conditions of the place, and 'all will be well."

Two Logislatures in a Pit.

From the papers at hand it would seem as though politics in the Sandwich Islands tospat were at the boiling stage. Just before the last steamer left a resolution of want of confidence in the ministry was want of confidence in the ministry was introduced in the Legislature. It was lost by four votes. There are four ministers, all of whom have four votes. Attorney-General Neumann, late of this city, in replying to the strictures of a political adversary, said in the House that the person in question was "a liar, a blackguard and a scoundret." From this guarded language one would naturally inler that the Attorney-General was aggrieved. All of the speeches in the house are transalated by an interpreter from Hawaiin into English, and vice verss. It must tax the Hawaiian! and vice versa. It must tar the Hawaiiar and vice versa. It must tax the Hawsiian' Inniuge pretty averely at times. It is said tout the speciacle of the interpreter hopping around, endeavoring to cope with the finen vindictive of an angry minister is a right for gods and men to weep over. The Hawsiian Assembly reminds me of that celebrated body that has passed into history—the Irish Parliament. This collection of great men was unique. It is said that devout Irish Nationalats pray for its return. So do I. During the deliberation of the Irish Parliament, it was not uncomreturn. So do I. Daring the deliberation of the Irish Parliament, it was not uncommon for the epectators in the galleries to take a hand (literally) in the debute, and they often grew so heated as to deceand to the floor. The peculiar speciacle would then be presented of a representative engaged in faticulfs with his constituents. But not always. There were those among them who had too high a sense of the dignity of the House. Who can forget the words of that member (bis name—alse!—is lost to history) who said: "Av the giniteleman from Tipperary will sthep outside wid me, I will bate some sinse into his House that a gintleman from Donegal bate another gintleman upon its flore."

As well expect life without air, as health without pure blood. Cleanse the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilia.

Daw of the Irish Parliament, it was not uncon

BAPTIZING THE WRONG MAY.

Summoring or stuttering is one of the most unpleasant things at times that a man can be fill cted with. A man may be afficied with almost any other matady and he cured or helped, but a man who stutters, though he may be at times free frem the habit, never has confilence in his talking urensils. They may run sill right for a time, but just as he expects most from his vocal organs, and wants to do his best, they go back on him, and he flounders sround and can't express his thoughts to save himself. A stutterer is usually the best natured man in the world: It seems as though nature picked out the juliest fellow as a watch-case to put poor vocal works into, so there won't be any kicking There is a gentiman living in Mary land who stutters just when he don't want to, but who can talk right along all right when there is nothing particular to be said. If he gets excited or interested and wants to orate, he gots stuck, and has time to walk around the block before he gots things to working again. He was out in lows recently, and at the hotel where he was stopping the traveling men were getting up a party one Sanday to go to a town a few miles distant where a camp meeting was in progress, and where there were to be a nomber of converts baptized, and they invited our triend, the sunterer, to go alore.

That our whole experience is India, where cholers is never wholly absent, tends to prove—nay, actually does prove—that cholers is not communicable from person.

That the disease cannot be ascribed to "Somebody elst;" that is, that the sick do not manufacture a "special poison" which couses the disease.

That cholera is a local disease—an epidemic affecting localities, and there depending on poliution of earth, air and water and unidings.

That the isolation of the sick cannot stop the disease, nor quarantine, nor cordons, nor the like. There, indeed, may tend fatally to approvate the disease, directly and indirectly, by turning away our attention from the only measures which constop it.

That the only preventive is to put the earth, air and water to not only make and every kind of samiary work, and, it cholera does come, to move the people away from the piaces where the disease lass broken out and then to cleanse.

Schattor Conger sat near the newspaper hacks in the Grand Pacific, enjoying his cigar and a chat with his triend, Raswell G. Horr.

"Can I see you a moment, Senator?" asked a strange young man.

"Certainly," said the Senator, rising.
The young man led him away across the large room and seemed to have sengething.

The Senator looked a little puzzled at first, then said, "Come with me," and, leading the way, he walked through the reading-room, up the ladies' parlor stairs, through the long entreaol to the disingroom, and, drawing him close into the corner behind a hat-rack, said:

"I don't know anything about it."

Their words were inaudible to the corner. Their words were inaudible to the rest of the peacengers, owing to the noise of the car wheels and the groaning and creaking of the vehicle. All of a sudden, however, the car stopped, and thrillings across the momentary silence, came this remark from the prettier of the pair?

"You just ought to see me turn a summerse!"

The effect was extraordinary. Two light-minded young men at the other end of the car laughed aloud, a clerical looking person expecite the pair half rose as if meditating flight, and then sat down again; an sged and severe aspected dame glared at the speaker through spectacles which focused her grazuntil it bored its way like a gimlet, and the faces of the two young women turned to a charming roceate hue.

And yet the speaker was not a circus rider, a trapers performer, or anything else codd, unfeminine, or indelicate. She belonged to one of our best families, and having just returned from the gymnasicm, which her sax in this city are now so sedulously cultivating, was describing to her friend her triumphs upon the parallel bats
